Riverside Innovation Honoree for November 2012

Riverside, California – On Tuesday, November 13, Riverside will announce OmniPlatform as the Innovation Honoree of the Month at the City Council meeting at 6:30 p.m.

OmniPlatform's Research and Development is located in Riverside and was founded by Drew Jorgenson who is President, CEO and Chief Software Architect. Mr. Jorgenson is a member of the Riverside Technology CEO Forum. He also serves on the SmartRiverside Board.

OmniPlatform provides enterprise technology and cloud services to a growing client base in the United States and internationally. Their product lines service the needs of start-ups, small and medium sized enterprises, as well as Fortune 500 corporations. They developed www.activebidder.com for Riverside's Finance Department where vendors can register on-line and download request for proposals (RFPs) and pay a nominal cost to download their proposal making submissions and review fully electronic and saving significant copying and mailing costs. They are in the process of reselling that solution nation-wide. They also developed a tablet based solution, TAPSemr, which is used by several hospitals nation-wide for capturing medical patient information and integrating it with complex medical systems for tracking all service provided to a patient and ensuring proper tracking of all associated costs while ensuring HIPAA compliance.

"Riverside is proud to recognize the significant efforts of Mr. Drew Jorgenson in growing his business in Riverside and providing leadership to our community" said Mayor Loveridge.
